

Sinclair Broadcasting uses the public airwaves free of charge and is obligated to serve the public interest. In an election year, this means giving equal time to each presidential candidate. Americans need information, not innuendo and innundation, for democracy to function. Sinclair's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation/monopoly.